Abstract:

One important challenge is managing an organization in which members conduct their business in an ethical manner. In our paper are two aspects important. One aspect of this challenge is having knowledge of environmental and organizational conditions that increase the likelihood of unethical behaviour. A second aspect for top managers is providing ethical leadership to the rest of the organizations through such methods as hiring the right people setting standards more than rules, not letting them selves get isolated, and making sure that their ethical example is impeccable et all times.
